and Strategy

MARYLAND | WASHINGTON DC | VIRGINIA

Singh and Associates will develop a plan for your specific needs to work to meet the requirements for the O-1 visa:

- Obtaining a peer group advisory opinion or a report from a person of expertise within your field. We will help you to assemble the documentation which must include;
- Lists of achievements within the applicants field, description of duties and estimations of abilities.

Singh and Associates can show you how to take your experience and achievements and put them on paper in the legally required manner.

- Did you know that the O-1 visa may be granted for a specific event, such as a tour, lecture series, or project?
- Let Singh and Associates help you navigate the necessary forms and agencies that each have a hand in delivering the final permission for the O-1 visa.

Singh and Associates can show you how to petition the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) for approval. We will show you how to correctly file the Form I-129, an essential first step for obtaining the necessary approvals.

With Singh and Associates, your I-129 will be placed with the appropriate Regional Service Center. Our goal is to help you gain the I-797 approval notice that is the doorway to a full O-1 visa.

We can also assist you in your effort to obtain the O-1 visa for your spouse or children, either during your application process or even after you have already been awarded an O-1 visa.

Special Consideration:

Are you ready to assemble the necessary paperwork, such as a photograph, passport, and the DS-160 and DS-157 form? Do you have a portfolio/resume ready? Will you need to pay the special “reciprocity fee?” This fee varies by type of visa and the nationality of the applicant.

Singh and Associates are experienced and knowledgeable immigration law specialists. We can make sure you have put forward the best prepared documentation to make obtaining the O-1 a reality. Let us begin helping you today.
