Non-immigrant Visa Category

H-1B VISA

Eligibility
and Strategy

MARYLAND | WASHINGTON DC | VIRGINIA

Singh and Associates knows how to navigate the paperwork and agency requirements to prepare you for the most successful and quickest path to obtaining the H-1B visa.

This special, temporary non-immigrant visa category can require:

- A baccalaureate or higher degree or recognized equivalent. This is often the minimum requirement for entry.
- The employer who is making application must normally require the degree or its equivalent for the position in question.
- The job duties must be specialized and complex, requiring a knowledge typically associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or a higher degree.
- The H-1B is also used for obtaining temporary faculty members, researchers, consultants, administrators, or individuals engaged in a variety of professional activities to the United States.

Singh and Associates know what the requirements are for the issue of a H-1B visa. This visa allows an alien to immediately practice the profession in the state of intended employment. The H-1B visa is specific to one employer.

The H-1B visa holder can only perform the job included in the original petition, though additional employment is possible if each employer has approved H-1B petitions.

We can also file for spouses and minor children (under age 21) of an H-1B worker. We prepare applications for the H-4 classification and can include them in the petition for the H-1B worker for dependents within the United States.

Special Consideration:

It is best to begin the H-1B process six months prior to the desired employment date. Singh and Associates can determine that the person qualifies for H-1B status and prepare the Labor Conditions Application.

Singh and Associates are experienced and knowledgeable immigration law specialists. We can make sure you have put forward the best prepared documentation to make obtaining the H-1B a reality. Let us begin helping you today.
